

The Washington Post today (June 3, 2009) features as one of its “Top Picks” the Bricco Dei Tati Barbera 2007...the article, titled “Great Value: Recession Busters,” features wines that “outperform at $10 or less...”

Bricco dei Tati Barbera 2007

Piemonte, Italy $8

“How often do we find a noteworthy barbera under $10? This is terrific for the price, with earthy cherry notes and a beautiful balance. Warning: This wine might persuade you to begin exploring the more expensive wines of Italy’s Piemonte region.

Siema: available in the District at Whole Foods Market P Street and Tenleytown; available in Virginia at Curious Grape and the Italian Store in Arlington, Planet wine & Gourmet in Alexandria, [Rick’s Wine and Gourmet in Alexandria], Virginia Wine Experience in Fredericksburg, all Whole Fools Market locations; by the glass at various Clyde’s Restaurant Group locations.”
