

THE WASHINGTON POST

says...

The Washington Post wine column “How to Read a Wine Bottle” says: “With foreign wines, the most important information is the name of the importer.” and he names this wine’s importer among his favorites. He goes onto list this as one of his “Top Picks”:

La Cappuccina “Verona Rosso”

Verona, Italy

“An unusual mixture of Merlot and the regional Italian red grape Raboso, this juicy, spicy charmer intrigues with its sense of the unknown. The label’s heart-bedecked tribute to Romeo and Juliet makes it a nice choice for Valentine’s Day dinner.”

The Washington Post

