

Did you know there was such a grape called "The American Grape?" European winemakers love this grape because they make the Fragolino wine with it (Fragolino means "little strawberry" in Italian). This is a perfect example of Fragolino—light and sparkling with a faint taste of strawberries! This comes from a sunny Swiss mountainside!

Fragolino!

Delea

Did you know there was such a grape called "The American Grape?" European winemakers love this grape because they make the Fragolino wine with it (Fragolino means "little strawberry" in Italian). This is a perfect example of Fragolino—light and sparkling with a faint taste of strawberries! This comes from a sunny Swiss mountainside!

Fragolino!

Delea

Did you know there was such a grape called "The American Grape?" European winemakers love this grape because they make the Fragolino wine with it (Fragolino means "little strawberry" in Italian). This is a perfect example of Fragolino—light and sparkling with a faint taste of strawberries! This comes from a sunny Swiss mountainside!

Fragolino!

Delea

Did you know there was such a grape called "The American Grape?" European winemakers love this grape because they make the Fragolino wine with it (Fragolino means "little strawberry" in Italian). This is a perfect example of Fragolino—light and sparkling with a faint taste of strawberries! This comes from a sunny Swiss mountainside!

Fragolino!

Delea

Did you know there was such a grape called "The American Grape?" European winemakers love this grape because they make the Fragolino wine with it (Fragolino means "little strawberry" in Italian). This is a perfect example of Fragolino—light and sparkling with a faint taste of strawberries! This comes from a sunny Swiss mountainside!

Fragolino!

Delea

Did you know there was such a grape called "The American Grape?" European winemakers love this grape because they make the Fragolino wine with it (Fragolino means "little strawberry" in Italian). This is a perfect example of Fragolino—light and sparkling with a faint taste of strawberries! This comes from a sunny Swiss mountainside!

Fragolino!

Delea

Did you know there was such a grape called "The American Grape?" European winemakers love this grape because they make the Fragolino wine with it (Fragolino means "little strawberry" in Italian). This is a perfect example of Fragolino—light and sparkling with a faint taste of strawberries! This comes from a sunny Swiss mountainside!

Fragolino!

Delea

Did you know there was such a grape called "The American Grape?" European winemakers love this grape because they make the Fragolino wine with it (Fragolino means "little strawberry" in Italian). This is a perfect example of Fragolino—light and sparkling with a faint taste of strawberries! This comes from a sunny Swiss mountainside!

Fragolino!

Delea

