

THE WASHINGTON POST

says...

The (Feb 2, 2011) Washington Post wine column “How to Read a Wine Bottle” says: “With foreign wines, the most important information is the name of the importer.” and he names this wine’s importer among his favorites. He goes onto list this as one of his “Top Picks”:

Villa ‘D “Campania Bianco,” 2009

Campania, Italy

“Made from an obscure grape called Coda di Volpe, it’s crisp and unassuming, but I couldn’t just put the glass down and forget about it. A great candidate for “house white.”

The Washington Post

